I'm not going to pretend to know the best way to handle the Microshaft Issue as I've been known to call it recently, but allowing MS to _give_ software to school systems is outrageous. I commend that act of giving schools that need it the resources to acquire such equipment/software, but I can not agree with giving them "Microsoft" stuff. Make them donate the value of the software according to their prices and allow the school system to spend the money on computer equipment/software as they see fit.

You blast Microsoft because they are a monopoly.
Don't continue to encourage their actions!
